

Setting the Course for a Successful Year

Grantsburg, WI - September 9, 2008 -

What do you get when you combine 3200 miles of travel to 17 cities and towns around the state of Wisconsin? “Operation Navigation”—a face to face initiative offering the Insight School of Wisconsin team a chance to meet with 282 of their 331 new students and their families. The purpose of these sessions was to prepare students and families for what lies ahead as they prepare for the upcoming school year. The importance of seeing students in a face to face setting to set the stage for a successful school year is a critical component, creating an environment for strong student engagement leading to success in online classes.

In August, with the new school year looming on the horizon, it was a top priority to prepare students for a successful school year. During “Operation Navigation” students and families were provided with insight in regard to their online learning program, information on the effort it takes to be successful in an online setting, and gave all families in attendance a chance to have their questions answered and concerns addressed.

There were a number of comments received from families on how helpful and beneficial these sessions were in addressing the educational world of online learning. It was an incredible experience to meeting our students—one the entire Insight School of Wisconsin team will look back on fondly as we watch our students learn and grow.
