

Bush Named Administrator of the Year

Grantsburg, WI - June 25, 2008 -

Insight School of Wisconsin Executive Director Jeff Bush was recently awarded the multistate online school network's School Administrator of the Year for his personal leadership and commitment to online education.

"Jeff's unwavering resolve - even in the midst of a crisis - showed remarkable poise and dedication," said Keith Oelrich, CEO of Insight Schools.

In December, the Wisconsin Court of Appeals ruled that the Northern Ozaukee School District was operating an online charter school in violation of state law - a legal victory for the state's largest teacher's union. This ruling had devastating implications for Insight School of Wisconsin, and all virtual students in the state.

"Jeff went above and beyond his position this past year," Oelrich said. "He tirelessly championed online schools, making the case that virtual schools are a viable, and important option for Wisconsin students."

Bush spent countless personal hours educating legislators, editors and the public about online schools, helping pave the way for new legislation that allowed online education to continue to be offered in Wisconsin.

"Students and families from all virtual schools in Wisconsin owe their gratitude to Jeff Bush and his colleagues," said Billy Beesley, principal at Insight School of Wisconsin.

The Insight School community congratulates Bush on receiving this well deserved award and wish him continued success.

"I'm proud to work with Jeff," Beesley said. "Educators dream of making a difference for one person—Jeff has made a difference for thousands of students here in Wisconsin."
